

Professor McGary is a member of the Rutgers University Philosophy Department. He received his BA from California State University at Los Angeles and his PhD from the University of Minnesota.

Dr. McGary has written hundreds of scholarly articles probing the alleged connection between racial identification and moral and political theories. Among his most noted books are the following:

- Reparations for African Americans, edited volume, Lanham, MD: Rowman & Littlefield Publishers, Forthcoming.
- My Larger Education, Howard McGary (introduction), Booker T. Washington (author), New York: Humanity Books, 2004.
- Race and Social Justice, Oxford: Blackwell Publishing, 1999.
- Social Justice and Local Development Policy (Robert Mier with R.P. Giloth, K.J. Moe, L. Alpen, B. Harrison, H. McGary, Jr., I. Sherr, T. Vietorisz and W. Wiewel), Sage Publications, 1993.
- Between Slavery and Freedom: Philosophy and American Slavery (with Bill E. Lawson), Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1992.

Over and beyond his scholarly achievements, Dr. McGary has devoted considerable time to making the field of Philosophy more diverse. His dedication to minority students is well known and very much valued.
